Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 03 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Less warm than recently. Fine for many.

Today:
Fairly cloud with a little rain over parts of north England, south and west Scotland and at first Northern Ireland. Either side brightening up with some good sunshine at times and feeling pleasant despite temperatures for many down on Wednesdays.

Tonight:
Clear spells for many. Chilly in southwest with some fog. Cloudier in Northern Ireland with a little rain. Another warm night in the southeast with some heavy rain possible later.

Friday:
Cloudy but perhaps close in the southeast with some rain at times. Fine with good sunny spells elsewhere and dry for most, though spots of rain for the far northwest.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Mostly fine and dry with sunny spells and only a few showers. Temperatures around or above average in light winds, but with some chilly nights in places.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.